Health care ethics is the field of applied ethics that is concerned with the vast array of moral decision-making situations that arise in the practice of medicine in addition to the procedures and the policies that are designed to guide such practice. Of all of the aspects of the human body, and of a human life, which are essential to one's well-being, none is more important than one's health.

Because beneficence is a fundamental principle of healthcare ethics, ethical egoism (i.e., the belief that our primary obligation is to ourselves and that selfishness is a virtue) is disconnected from health care. This is true because most people enter health care as a profession because they want to help people.
